Government Keynote - Enjoying the Built Environment Responsibly

by Ir Alfred WH Sit, Deputy Director, EMSD, HKSAR Government
The desire to venture into new frontiers is one of the key drivers for the advancement of mankind. But as we explore, it is important to remain mindful of the impacts we create on these uncharted territories. In the US, the Leave No Trace Centre for Outdoor Ethics is a popular outdoor ethics program to promote the enjoyment of the outdoor environment responsibly. On the same token, this Conference, attended by many building and facility management professionals, both local and overseas, is an appropriate platform to promote the importance of enjoying our built environment responsibly. While other distinguished speakers will share on their latest insights, from clean water delivery to energy efficient chillers, from latest development in building management systems to advances in workplace design, this Speaker will illustrate how the Electrical and Mechanical Services Department, both an E&M regulator and a service provider within the government, is facilitating and encouraging the industry, through legislation and project implementations, on how we can enjoy the built environment responsibly
